Board of Education
Plainfield, New Jersey

Gentlemen:

Submitted, herewith, is the Annual Report of the Board of Education for the School Year, 1945-1946.

ENROLLMENT

The total enrollment for 1945-1946 was 6137. This is 163 less than the previous year. About two-thirds of the reduction occurred in the elementary schools. In the table enrollment by grades, a drop will be noticed in the kindergarten. This is due to a new rule of the Board raising the entrance age to 5 years. We may anticipate an increased enrollment in the kindergarten and primary grades during the next few years.

The high school enrollment for the past five years averaged 1764. There are indications that this average will remain about the same for another three or four years after which time there will be a gradual increase.

MEASURING THE SUCCESS OF OUR SCHOOLS

Measuring the success of any school system on a yearly basis is somewhat difficult due to the delayed values that come from education. There is much evidence to show, however, that our educational program has been effectively carried out and that our teaching staff is loyal, cooperative and efficient. During the year we have had a number of visitors from other school systems all of whom have made complimentary remarks on our program and the progress that is being made.

MAINTAINING BOUNDARY LINES

We have moved a long step forward in taking a definite stand on boundary lines, by requiring that all children attend the schools in the districts in which they reside; the only exceptions being those caused by heavy enrollment when it becomes necessary to transfer pupils to smaller classes or a transfer based on a doctor's certificate.

This year we had only three certificate changes and no enrollment transfers. Next year we must send a full class from the Franklin School to the Evergreen School, independent of residence because the Hubbard School to which the class should be sent has no available room.

TEACHER SHORTAGE

The shortage of teachers is giving all school systems considerable concern and it is now reaching alarming proportions. Next September many classrooms throughout the country will be without teachers. At the time of writing this report we have been fortunate in filling all but two of our vacancies. Every effort is being made to complete our staff with the type of teachers that we have been accustomed to engaging. This is becoming increasingly difficult, however, due to our salary scale.

Teachers' colleges are still reporting small enrollments and we must not overlook the fact that it will be four years before the young people enrolled are certified to teach; in the meantime we shall be feeling the results of the increased birth-rate by larger enrollments in our primary grades. The teachers who are available will be snapped up by cities with the highest salary scales. Unfortunately more teachers are being attracted to the secondary field of education than to the elementary which increases our difficulties. It is hoped, however, that the trend to single salary scales will result in more young people becoming certified to teach in the elementary fields.

THE PLAINFIELD SCHOOL SURVEY

The evaluation of elementary schools has been completed, and the data compiled is now being set up in readable form. The high school evaluation is ready for general discussion, and in the near future recommendations should be made based on the outcome of our conferences. The next step is the building program. Various reports and data will be submitted to the Board for its consideration, together with several possible solutions to the overcrowded conditions in our high school. Before the close of the school year, 1946-47, all three reports should be completed and available to civic bodies and interested citizens. The survey is unique in as much as it is being made under the auspices of the Board of Education, the Mayor, councilmen and school administrators.

It should result in a much better understanding of the many problems with which we are confronted in the education of the youth of Plainfield.

CREATIVE EDUCATION

For centuries a large part of education was formal, stereotyped and in many respects primitive in method and technique. Many phases are still badly in need of revision. Little wonder that we have made relatively slow progress in the art of living, and that we have through our educational processes turned out millions of automatons—unthinking people without vision, imagination or ability to develop a form of living where people of all nations might live together in peace.

The slaughter of millions of human beings in two world wars over a period of 25 years, the barbarous practices of so-called educated nations surpassing in fiendishness the doings of savages in the darkest jungles of Africa should be sufficient to make a modern man come to a full realization that something is radically wrong. The significant expression of H. S. Wells in his "Outline of History"—"Throughout the ages there has been a continuous race between education and catastrophe" conveys a very real and momentous warning. The race is on today and we are by no means sure of what the result will be in the new atomic age in which we now find ourselves.

It may well mean the destruction of civilization; on the other hand, if we learn to use our creative powers and put them to the right use, it is quite likely that we shall be able to develop a new form of living surpassing in effectiveness and beauty anything dreamed of by man. To-date we have failed because we have not comprehended all the possibilities for good and evil that lie within the human mind.

In our educational processes we have too frequently treated the child's mind as a recording box to give out just what it takes in. We have failed to recognize its great potentialities for creative thinking, and much of its ultimate power has been wasted because our educational methods have given it but little upon which to feed.

If we are to save our civilization, man must be taught to develop his creative powers and use his mind more efficiently. Training to do this is the duty of the educator and the job of the classroom teacher. Creative learning and thinking must no longer be thought of as something intangible or mysterious associated with a few gifted individuals.

Dr. Crow in his excellent book "Creative Education" states—"The evidence seems convincing that creative learning is a possibility for all normal children. It has become a realization as yet only in the hands of the very exceptional artist teacher; but with the development of a new program, of a new and unprecedented attitude and purpose, of new and unprecedented techniques, of a new mastery of tested knowledge, the possibility may some day become a reality."

It is the aim of the administration and the teaching force of the Plainfield schools to further this type of creative learning. Artist teachers may be scarce and the process slow, but with a full realization of all that is at stake, means and ways should be found that will enable us to move forward. We are developing a new form of living, new processes in industries and new organization in government. Now we must have a new form of education—an education that is creative, powerful and dynamic, fitted and geared to the needs of a modern world.

PAINLESS LEARNING

For nearly two decades under the caption of Progressive education, practically all school systems have been engaged in developing new practices and techniques with a view to breaking away from the formalism which for so many years has been associated with the education of youth.

Unfortunately, the pendulum swung too far and we are just beginning to realize that a painless sugar coated type of education is getting us into considerable difficulty. The philosophy of "free expression" has led to the breaking down of educational standards and the desire on the part of many of the young people in our public schools as well as colleges to find "An Easy Way". Youth must be made to realize that there is no easy way to learning or success in life.

Our aim in Plainfield for the next few years will be to develop in the elementary schools a type of learning consistent with the needs of modern youth and child life. At the same time we shall keep in mind that the underlying principle in elementary education centers around building a foundation for future learning by means of the three "R's".

We shall aim for a middle course somewhere between the old "formalism" and the new fangled "progressive freedom" which has proven to be such a myth.

In the high school we shall continue to maintain the standards of secondary education, keeping in mind the special provisions that must be made for those in the lower end of the educational scale, but at the same time paying careful attention to the requirements of those in the upper end of the scale. It is in this area we must look for our future leaders, and now more than ever before it is essential that potential ability be recognized. The doctrine of "hard work" as a means to success must be impressed on our student body. This does not imply that less attention or direction will be given to the play life of youth. Play is essential for normal development, but "work" and "play" must be considered as separate units of activity with the exception of kindergarten and early primary grades where some merging may be desirable. Gradually, however, as the pupil advances, work must take on a new significance and play a new form. For years in all too many instances we have been confusing liberty with license. It is now tremendously important that some of our educational philosophy and child psychology be drastically changed in order that youth may be properly prepared for the difficult era that lies ahead.

It should be noted here that the Plainfield school system is making definite headway along the lines indicated. This progress is due in no small measure to the vision shown by the Board of Education in the adoption of modern policies.

I would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to members of the Board for the support and cooperation given me throughout the year.

Respectfully submitted,

ARTHUR F. HOPPER
